Circulated to 108,000 homes and businesses by Hackney Council

Issue 247 10 January 2011

Looking down the tunnel from Dalston Junction, where a new section of track will connect passengers to Canonbury and Highbury & Islington stations

WITH a new section of the East London Line due to open in February, Hackney can look forward to another link to the Tube network. The line will connect Dalston Junction station to the Victoria Line at Highbury & Islington, and to the rest of the London Overground network. Building the link involved construction work in, around and under Kingsland High Street. Hackney Today got a sneak preview as construction workers put the finishing touches to the line. The link is part of a bigger project to create an 'orbital railway' around London by 2012. It is anticipated that 33million people will use the London Overground this year. MORE NEW HOMES

By James Willsher

The Council has contracted Lovell
Partnerships to build 67 new homes at the site of the former Alexandra National House, in

Finsbury Park; and 20 homes at Bridge House, off Homerton High Street, as part of the Six Estates regeneration programme.

The properties will be managed by Hackney Homes, and are due to be completed by March 2012.

Regeneration in Hackney has received £16million in funding from the Homes and Communities Agency
(HCA) since September
2009, not only for the

Finsbury Park and Homerton schemes, but also to provide 114 new homes at Ottaway Court and Rendlesham House, E5; and Bridport House, Colville Estate, N1, where construction work began early last year.

Alexandra National House was mostly bedsits. The new development will include much-needed family-sized three and four-bedroom homes. The Council has also agreed that an additional 42 private homes can be built at this site, in return for Lovell's investment in the Six Estates programme, including the construction of 20 more homes at the Bridge House site to re-house residents from regeneration estates.

George McGee, Chair of the Six Estates Steering Group, said: "We have two sites nearing completion, and a further two sites have gone through planning, providing more social housing to give tenants a better standard of living."

Cllr Karen Alcock, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, added: "The Council pledged that despite the economic climate we would find innovative new methods to provide housing fit for the 21st century, and this is one of the ways in which this commitment is being realised."

David Cameron, Boris Johnson and local schoolchildren gaze in wonderment at the stadium lights

THE Olympic Stadium's 523 floodlights were illuminated for the first time on 20 December.

Housed in 14 towers, 70 metres above the track, the lights will ensure that sporting action during the Games is properly illuminated, and meets highdefinition TV standards for the world's media who will be camped out in the 2012 international broadcast centre in Hackney. Prime Minister, David Cameron, and local school children officially switched on the lights, along with Mayor of London, Boris Johnson, London Organising Committee Chair, Seb Coe, Olympic Park workers and residents.

The venue remains on track for completion more than a year before the Games.

Funding reduced

By Gareth Greene

OLLOWING on from October's Comprehensive Spending Review, the Coalition Government announced in December the cuts it will be making to the borough's funding.

The local government finance settlement showed that Hackney's funding will be cut by £44million in 2011/12, and by £23million in 2012/13, confirming Hackney's claim last year that the majority of the Government's reductions would be made in the first year, rather than being spread evenly over four years.

There will be further cuts in 2013/14 and 2014/15, but the Government plans to completely revise the way money is distributed between local councils, which makes it impossible for any borough to predict what their share of the remaining cash will be in those years.

The funding cuts for Hackney in 2011/12 will be double what the Government initially indicated in last October's spending review and are considerably higher than those in other more affluent areas.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, has been lobbying the Government to provide further grant funding to boroughs such as Hackney – which have higher levels of The total of Government grant reductions are far greater than what can be covered by further efficiency savings need – or at the very least, to reconsider how the cuts are phased so that councils can better manage their impact and protect vital services that residents rely on.

Mayor Pipe said: "The Government has responded to our challenge to them with measures including a one-off grant being made to a few councils that face the largest cuts across the country. Whilst we have benefited from these measures, much of the cash is time limited so the Council still faces a significant financial challenge in the years ahead.

"We remain determined to protect frontline services in the upcoming budget, but for future years the total of Government grant reductions are far greater than what can be covered by further efficiency savings and management reductions. Every council in the country will need to make some very difficult decisions."

Message from the Mayor

Festive period's unsung heroes

LET me take this opportunity to wish you all a Happy New Year; I do hope that you enjoyed the Christmas holidays and were able to take the opportunity to have a well-earned rest.

While most of us were spending time with our friends and families, it's important to remember the unsung heroes who sacrificed their Christmas and New Year to keep vital services running in Hackney.

Let's spare a thought to the staff at Homerton hospital, who continued to provide round the clock healthcare for those in need; the police officers who keep the borough's streets and communities safe; and the many Council staff who worked through the holiday period.

Regardless of the fact that it was Christmas, these professionals ensured that it was business as usual for vital front-line services across the borough.

You may have heard in the media that a number of councils across the country have been criticised for not collecting the rubbish over the holiday period. Hackney was certainly not one of those, having provided a full rubbish collection and recycling service throughout Christmas and the New Year.

And let's not forget the extra effort that went into gritting the borough's roads and footpaths during the cold snap prior to Christmas. All of the main roads were gritted, as were the main access routes to hospitals, schools and libraries. The Council received numerous messages of praise for what was achieved, particularly compared to other parts of London, and I would like to take this opportunity to thank publicly all the staff involved for a job well done.

I'd also like to pass on my congratulations to the nine Hackney residents who were named in the 2011 New Year's honours list, including former councillor Nargis Khan; Rupert Tyson, Chair of Hackney Homes; and Gordon Bell for his services to the community.

It is expected that 33 million people will use the extended East London Line this year

Preparations are under way for the opening of the latest section of the London Overground linking Hackney to the Tube network. Hackney Today got a sneak preview

By Colin Joseph

ESIDENTS will soon be able to benefit from a further new section of the East London Line (ELL) when it opens next month.

A 2.1km section of track now connects Dalston Junction to Canonbury, and Highbury & Islington London Overground stations and will make travelling around the capital easier than ever before.

The link is due to open ahead of schedule in February, giving residents easy access to the Victoria line, as well as the wider London Overground network.

Eight trains an hour are set to run along the new section of track. Already, 12 trains per hour travel southwards from Dalston Junction, calling at three new London Overground stations that opened in Hackney last April – Haggerston, Hoxton and Shoreditch High Street. The line then runs as far south as New Cross, Crystal Palace and West Croydon.

Building the link involved construction work in, around and under Kingsland High Street.
Transport for London (TfL) has invested £1billion in the extension and upgrade – the biggest transport infrastructure project for London since the opening of the Jubilee Line extension in 1999.

Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, said: "This is the culmination of a long campaign and I'm pleased to see Hackney now well connected to the Tube map. Easy access to the Tube network will make a huge difference to residents and businesses, and I'd like to thank TfL for their commitment in delivering this project."

Huw Edwards, TfL
Programme Manager for the East London Line extension, said: "This project would not have been as successful as it was without the support and backing of Hackney Council. By collaborative working, we managed to keep the high street open, at the same time as we were completing this major project underneath it."

The final phase of work will extend the line further from Clapham Junction to Dalston Junction via Surrey Quays. This link will complete a planned 'orbital railway' for London, and is

The gospel performance at the Geffrye Museum on 25 November

ARMCHAIR Rhythms was an apt name for a project celebrating gospel music historically sung in the comfort of people's homes. Over three weeks last year, the Geffrye Museum in Kingsland Road recorded oral histories of residents aged 55-plus, particularly from African and Caribbean communities.
Participants shared memories of practicing faith in their living rooms and listening to and watching Christian TV and radio. The study ended with a performance of favourite gospel songs on 25 November.

Laura Bedford, Education
Officer at the museum, said:
"Many churches were set up in living rooms in the 1950s and 1960s, and for many, the home as a religious space is just as important today.

"The Geffrye Museum is a museum of the home, and we have evidence of how religion has been practised and celebrated in the home over the last 400 years."

The project was organised in collaboration with the Geffrye Museum, The RobinSing Music Academy and Greentree Productions.

Be CREATE-ive

THE Council is encouraging local artists to submit ideas for a £40,000 community culture award in 2011.

The annual Bank of America Merrill Lynch CREATE Art Award helps artists living or working in the London 2012 host boroughs – Hackney, Greenwich, Waltham Forest, Newham, Tower Hamlets, and now Barking and Dagenham – to produce art commissions with residents.

Hackney resident, Robin Turner (above), took the prize last year with his Roam minibus, exploring East London's urban landscape by day, and presenting gigs, readings and DJ sets at night.

CREATE is a cultural partnership of the host boroughs set up to develop an internationally significant annual arts festival in the lead up to, and beyond, 2012. The deadline for submissions is 14 January. For info e-mail: artaward@host-boroughs.org.uk; or visit: www.createlondon.org

Volunteer year

MORE than 90million volunteers from across the continent will be celebrated as part of the European Year of Volunteering 2011. A tour will visit every capital city, starting in Budapest this month and finishing in Malta in November.

A London visit is scheduled to tie-in with National Volunteers Week, from 1-6 June.

A team of 27 'relay' reporters (above) will compile stories on volunteering in each member country.

The reporter for Britain will be Slovenian cameraman, Jure Rejec. Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet member with responsibility for the voluntary sector, said: "Hackney would welcome Jure to the borough to record some of the great work happening here."

Census jobs

THE Office for National Statistics is looking for people to work in Hackney during the 2011 census. It is particularly keen to hear from people who could work as census collectors in the south of the borough. This would involve visiting households to talk with people who have not returned their census questionnaires, and explaining the importance of the census in order to encourage completion and return of the forms.

All roles are paid and will last approximately six weeks from 21 March. Hours are flexible but you must be able to work during the evening and weekends. For info call: 0845 304 0960; or visit: www.censusjobs.co.uk

Pupils' prowess

The Department for Education data has revealed 71 per cent of Hackney Key Stage 2 pupils – three to six-year-olds – achieved a recommended level in English and Maths, a rise of 14 percentage points (pp) over five years.

This pulls the borough to just three per cent outside the current national average, while making it This could not have been achieved without dedicated staff at every level and, most importantly, pupils the most improved area in England. Hackney was 13pp below the average in 2005/06.

The Learning Trust
Deputy Chief Executive,
Steve Belk, congratulated staff and pupils for the improvements, saying they should be 'immensely proud'. One of the standout successes was Grazebrook Primary School, N16, where 87 per cent of pupils compared to 61 per cent two years ago.

In addition 89 per cent of pupils from Kingsmead School achieved the level, up from 65 per cent in 2008. Gainsborough also made great strides, increasing 15pp to 66 per cent over the last two years.

Parkwood School is the highest performing primary in Hackney at Key Stage 2, with 95 per cent of students achieving the expected level. Headteacher Pat Cardis said: "I'm delighted our pupils continue to meet these high standards.

This could not have been achieved without dedicated staff at every level and,
most importantly, pupils who are keen, eager to learn and supported by their families."

Cllr Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Children's Services, added; "These latest results show the hard work and investment in our primary schools is making a real difference. The teachers, parents, and most importantly, the pupils of Hackney should be congratulated for their achievements." 6 10 January 2011 advertising

Have your say on the plans for the new Stormont House School and Hackney Downs Park

Stormont House School is a school for young people with special educational needs and is located on Downs Park Road. As part of its borough wide Building Schools for the Future (BSF) programme Hackney Council has secured funding to rebuild the school and provide a better educational opportunity for current and future pupils.

A six week informal consultation will run during January 2011 before the Council submits an application to the Planning Inspectorate. The Council proposes to build a new school north of the existing building and to create a grassed area on the land vacated by the school which will then become common land.

In addition to this informal consultation, there will be further opportunities to provide feedback during the statutory consultation period once the application has been submitted.

The Council would like your views if you use the school, live locally or regularly visit Hackney Downs Park, to make sure we create a school of which the whole community can be proud.

Hackney is one of the most diverse places in the UK. In this regular feature, we profile the borough's great & good or just plain interesting

Kevin Moore, chair of the Hackney Society, which works to preserve the borough's buildings

By James Willsher

T'S not just about old buildings – good design can improve your life, according to Kevin Moore, Chair of the Hackney Society.

The 43-year-old has lived in Hackney for the best part of two decades, and is infectiously passionate about the borough's built environment – past, present and future.

He maintains that Hackney has a great many beautiful buildings, and what's important is they make an impact and contribute to the regeneration of an area.

"Good design and built environment can make an impact on people's lives," he says.

"Like some school programmes that have taken place, buildings can improve your education, such as the Bridge and Mossbourne academies.

"The pupils who go there are influenced by their surroundings, and their surroundings contribute to their education."

The impressive new academy buildings are rather different to Kevin's first experiences of Hackney

We're very pro new buildings. If you're going to construct something, it should be the best thing you can build back in 1992. He says: "I moved to Hoxton as it was the only place I could afford and it was central. There were mushrooms growing on the wall, but it was twice the size and half the price of everything else."

Despite this unpromising start, Kevin fell in love with the borough. He moved to Mare Street seven years later, and while renovating his current home (built in 1780), became interested in the history of the area, fuelled by a photograph of the property he found in the Hackney Archives, taken in 1905.

Kevin joined a Conservation Area Advisory Committee, which assists the Council in considering planning applications which could affect the character of a conservation area, and on design policies.

From there, he joined the Hackney Society, a voluntary group that works to preserve the borough's heritage and involve local people in conservation and regeneration, becoming Chair four years ago.

"While we campaign to save old buildings we equally try to make Hackney a better place to live and work in, and champion good design, building and architecture," he says.

"Gone are the days of moaning about things, it's trying to make things happen, and we're very pro new buildings.

"If you're going to construct something, it should be the best thing you can build – good contemporary architecture will be the listed building of the future," he adds.

The Hackney Society isn't just about influencing planning applications, however: there are organised walks, lectures, debates, a Podcast to assist a stroll along the Olympic Park's boundaries, themed outings, an encyclopaedic website, projects including charting the history of Hackney's healthcare, as well as coffee table publications such as 'Hackney: Modern, Restored, Forgotten, Ignored'.

Kevin, who works as Chief Executive Officer of Walworth Garden Farm, an environmental education charity in south London, cites the Clapton Portico, in Linscott Road, and Bateman's Row, Shoreditch, as examples of some of Hackney's best buildings, as well as the newly restored Stoke Newington Town Hall, which he points out is one of only a few structures to retain Second World War camouflage on its exterior. He adds: "There are so many beautiful buildings in Hackney that need looking after."

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I was given a Christmas present that I really don't want. Is there any way I could give it to someone who needs it or swap it for something else?

A: The Council's regular Give or Take events have proved popular with residents who can get rid of items they no longer want, and pick up ones they do, on the same day. Watch this space for more events in 2011.

Firefighters help out with filling up the restored pond in Haggerston Park

By Sarah Menz

HE Council has given a pond in Haggerston Park a face lift as part of ongoing work to improve the green space.

But when the rain refused to help out with the final stages of the project, the Council called in firefighters from Bethnal Green Fire Station to fill up the pond.

They were cheered on and assisted by around 60 students from Sebright It's good to see the community coming together to make a positive change to their local environment

School, E2, and a team of volunteers.

Since work began, the pond has been dug out, re-lined and topped with clay to make it more watertight. The pond has also received an upgrade to a wooden viewing platform which children use to gather water and insects for examination.

The Council has been working with the Hackney Park User Group to improve the park, and the initiative includes planting 200 trees in the Haggerston Park Community Orchard and Food Growing Garden. An upgrade to the BMX track is due in the spring. Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "Parks are an important community resource and the Council has invested in improvements to many parks, including Haggerston over the last year. It's really good to see the community coming together to make a positive change to their local environment."

All energy-saving light bulbs can be recycled at the new banks

New life for old bulbs

RESIDENTS can now recycle low-energy light bulbs thanks to a groundbreaking partnership between the Council and green company Recolight.

The Government, retailers and energy companies are phasing out traditional light bulbs, and low-energy versions are increasingly common in homes.

Hackney is the first London borough to offer this service. New banks for low energy bulbs have been installed at five on-street recycling sites around the borough.

Light bulbs of any sort should not be put in the Council's Green Box recycling service, because if they break they could be harmful to collection crews. Older style light bulbs are not recyclable.

Judges spot owl play in photo competition

HACKNEY has come out on top in a competition aiming to showcase the wildlife that shares London's streets, gardens and parks. Year 11 Petchey Academy student, Adam Hawkins, snapped up the under-18s prize in London-wide photography competition, 'Life Between The Lines'.

He received praise from judges for his shot of a barn owl in flight, captured in Dagenham. The competition also showcased projects that support wildlife, and first prize went to Mabley Green Community Meadow, E9.

Set up by Mabley Green Users Group with support from the Council this summer, the meadow has been transformed by an army of volunteers.

The planting of bulbs, shrubs and wildflowers has seen increasing numbers of bees and birds recorded at the site.

The competition was run by the RSPB and London Underground.

New school opened

30 years.

Two years in the making, the new £8.2million, threestorey building now houses twice the number of pupils, features an all-weather area the size of a sports hall, has a facade designed by Turner Prize nominee Liam Gillick and was developed through consultation with the community by Meadowcroft Griffin Architects.

Pupils banged the drum in celebration at the 7 December opening ceremony (pictured), where the school orchestra and choir entertained guests.

Parent Alice Bruggen said: "It was very exciting watching the new building go up bit by bit and the children feel proud of their new school and very much a part of it.

"The high ceilings and large windows offer wonderful views, natural light and a real sense of space, and you are hit by a refreshing smell of wood when you enter the building."

Former head teacher Heather Rockhold, who retired this Christmas after 25 years' service, said: "I'm delighted that this day has finally come. We have a wonderful school building that will support and enhance the learning of south Hackney children for generations to come."

School keeper departs

CHRISTINE Doyle was in fine form during her retirement party after 37 years' service at Cardinal Pole Catholic School, E9.

Things she will miss? "Cleaning up toilets and sick," the former school keeper said.

An ex-Cardinal Pole pupil herself, Christine started as a cleaner in 1974, becoming school keeper in 1992. Over the years she has worked with four head teachers and seen 7,500 pupils pass through the doors.

She described some of her favourite memories including the school's Queen's Jubilee party; attending Cardinal Pole's evening classes, where she also met her husband; and a previous winter that saw the children screaming to keep the playground full of snow.

Christine also recalled getting into trouble as a youngster for swapping the contents of one teacher's briefcase with bricks – the teacher didn't realise until he got home.

News in brief

Clapton Girls' students with funding cheque

The social change networks

TWO enterprising student businesses have won £500 each to develop their social change project ideas.

Industrious teams from Clapton Girls' Technology College and Our Lady's Convent School presented plans at charity Envision's 'Pitch for Change' event – a Dragon's Den-style contest providing funds for social and sustainable living ventures led by young people.

Clapton's pitch, for promoting a positive image of the borough with projects including painting a community wall and creating a community garden, was commended for its imaginative approach.

Our Lady's, which developed a project to send cards to women in prison, was praised for tackling a sensitive issue by highlighting the effect imprisonment can have on a family. Clapton student Rashida Khanom said: "Pitch 4 Change was an amazing experience. It helped us to get passionate about something that everyone feels is a big issue — improving the image of Hackney."

Learning volunteers cheered

VOLUNTEERS have been praised for 'helping others in their communities get a second chance at learning'.

Twenty nine Community Learning Champions (CLC) picked up their NVQ certificates in advice and guidance from The Learning Trust on 17 December.

CLCs help residents who may be apprehensive about finding out more about educational opportunities. At the last count, they had clocked up more than 3,450 volunteer hours and helped over 300 adults.

As a result of their experience and the programme's qualifications, five CLCs have gone on to secure paid employment as advice and guidance workers.

Others will continue to work voluntarily in their communities.

Jill Walker-Murrain, 50, said: 'In the beginning I was very excited about gaining a qualification, especially as I had left school qualification, especially as I had left school with hardly any qualifications at all. There were times during the course that I wanted to give up. Now I'm so happy I persevered. "Doing this has proved to me it doesn't matter how old you are – you can still be successful in going back to study."

Win Woody Sez tickets

At the inauguration of Barack Obama in January 2009, Pete Seeger led a crowd of hundreds of thousands in singing 'This Land Is Your Land'.

The spirit of the song's writer, folk legend Woodie Guthrie, is celebrated in new musical 'Woody Sez', hitting the stage of the Arts Theatre this month. Hundreds of musicians acknowledge their debt to the singer-songwriter, including Bob Dylan, Bruce Springsteen and Billy Bragg, and the singer is cited as a standout protest singer who fought for and lifted the spirits of people during the Great Depression. The musical paints a portrait of this revered cult figure's fascinating and tragic life.

Broadway veteran David Lutken takes the leading role and is joined by fiddler Darcie Deaville, multiinstrumentalist Helen Russell and Andy Teirstein, a classical composer. Directed by Nick Corley, the musical was first brought to life in 2007 at the Edinburgh Fringe. Since then, the show has grown through festival productions in Belfast, Brighton (Argus Angel Award), and back in the US in Woody's home state of Oklahoma.

Woody Sez runs at the Arts Theatre, Great Newport St, WC2, until 2 April. For more info, call: 020 7907 7092 or visit www.artstheatrewestend.com

The Painter

Until 12 Feb, Arcola Theatre, Ashwin Street, E8

"English painting is dead. Dealers making fortunes out of sentimental dross. Dogs. Cherubs," laments the controversial Joseph Mallord William Turner in 'The Painter', Arcola Theatre's first production in its new Ashwin Street home. Harry Potter actor Toby Jones takes the leading role as the romantic landscape painter, rumoured to have been called 'mad' by Queen Victoria. The production follows the tempestuous artist who started as a 19th century working class cockney and was transformed into a man that would change the face of UK and international art.

Reliant on his father and deeply affected by his mother's rejection. Turner became isolated from the atypical breed of artists of the day; The Painter explores the relationships, the competition with John Constable and the passion of an artist destined for stardom.

The play is written by Rebecca Lenkiewicz, stars Niamh Cusack playing the role of Sarah Danby, the mistress that Turner had two daughters with yet never publicly acknowledged, and returns Arcola founder Mehmet Erget to production directing duties. PPLICATIONS for funding to support Hackney's talented young athletes are now open.

Individuals, clubs and community groups can apply for up to £500 from the Council's Youth Sports Fund (YSF) for training, equipment and travel.

Gold and Silver award winners will also get a free or half price membership at one of the borough's leisure centres, courtesy of operator Greenwich Leisure I hope Jess continues to excel and improve ... the grant paid for the extra equipment she needed

Limited (GLL). Cabinet Member for Community Services, Cllr Jonathan McShane, said: "There are many talented youngsters in Hackney who deserve a helping hand, and our Youth Sports Fund can help. If you need some financial support, then why not apply."

In 2010, the fund helped 33 individuals and four clubs. Nine coaches were also funded to complete a Level 2 or higher coaching award.

Successful applicants included John James, 20, who represents the UK in visually impaired judo; Shequila Joseph, 15, and

The Council set up the fund in 2006 after wresting £300,000 from sportswear giant Nike, for using the borough's logo without permission on a range of clothing. The closing date for applications is 31 March.

Estates on the big screen

A GROUP of young people from Fellows Court and Fawcett estates are set to take to the red carpet for a screening of their own films this month.

Since September, they have directed, filmed and edited six programmes about local issues, working with filmmakers from documentary specialists Chocolate Films.

On 22 January, all six Estate Vision internet TV broadcasts will be shown at Dalston's Rio Cinema.

The programmes include a humorous insight into hair weave – using artificial or human hair pieces – and the different opinions it raises, as well as a cooking show, and a showcase of local rapping talent.

Chocolate Films' Project Manager, Ana Tovey, said: "We've been really impressed with the programmes they've made and how they've got to grips with the live broadcast technology."

The project was run in partnership with Hackney Homes, Space, youth engagement programme Elevate@Skyway, and Fellows Court Youth Club, which is run by the Council's Youth Service.

Neehara Wijeyesekera, from Hackney Homes, added: "We are always looking at different ways to engage young residents."

NHS shake-up

All stories by

Trusts (PCTs) are merging as part of a Government reorganisation of the National Health Service.

From April, NHS City and Hackney's management team will partner those from Newham and Tower Hamlets.

The PCTs will share directors and a single chief executive, Alwen Williams, bringing many functions together to reduce costs.

According to NHS City and Hackney, around £14million is expected to be saved across the three areas, however, there will also be up to 180 job losses.

Following a Government white paper published last year, all PCTs and strategic health authorities are to be abolished in 2013. Functions such as commissioning health services will be transferred from PCTs to GP practices.

Alwen said: "The three PCTs have a fantastic record in reducing health inequalities and improving the health of local people. This work will continue to be at the centre of everything we do. We are developing new arrangements to support GPs as they prepare to take on greater leadership and decision-making roles in the commissioning of health services." Jane Winder, Chair of NHS City and Hackney, added: "It is our aim to ensure we work with all of our partners so that the experience and outcomes for local people using health services is further improved."

Health and social care watchdog, Hackney LINk, is opposing the abolition of PCTs, and aims to form an alliance against the Government's plans with politicians, community organisations, health service staff and the public.

Chairman Malcolm Alexander said: We believe that the proposals in the NHS White Paper are not grounded in evidence, or in any clear mandate from the electorate, and will cause massive damage to NHS services."

He added that it was 'wholly unreasonable to expect the NHS to be able to undertake the biggest reorganisation in its history while at the same time making huge cuts to services and staff'.

Gong for lung care team

A HOMERTON hospital lung disease service has scooped two awards in a national competition.

The hospital's Acute Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease Early Response Service (ACERS) won both the respiratory care and team of the year titles at the Nursing in Practice Magazine awards.

Homerton Nurse Consultant, Matthew Hodson, said: "It's great to get these awards as recognition for the team. "ACERS is innovative - we are a responsive, community focused service, and we are helping many people to a better quality of life through self-management of chronic conditions. "Awareness is the key message. In cold weather we urge anyone with COPD symptoms, such as chest infections or a chronic cough, to get in touch with a GP for a breathing test. You should have a test if you are breathless on minimal exertion; if you've smoked in the past; or if you are a current smoker aged 35 years or more."

GPs or practice nurses can carry out a breathing test to check lung health. For more info call ACERS on: 020 8510 5107; or visit: www.lunguk.org

Emergency care changes

PLANS that aim to improve hospital services in North East London were approved at a public meeting in December. Feedback from a consultation of residents, GPs and councils was reviewed before the Joint Committee for Primary Care Trusts approved the proposals – part of the Health for North East London programme, which aims to improve services for local people. It is led by clinicians, seven primary care trusts, and five hospital trusts.

Plans include providing emergency services at five, rather than six hospitals – The Royal London, Queen's, Whipps Cross, Homerton and Newham.

King George Hospital in Ilford will no longer have an A&E department, but will continue to offer urgent care. There are plans to develop it into a centre of excellence for planned care, such as knee and hip surgery. Doctor-led birthing facilities will be offered at five hospitals.

> Dr Mike Gill, Joint Clinical Director, Health for North East London, said:

"By providing emergency services at five hospitals we can move towards ensuring we have 24/7 consultant cover for those patients who need this type of critical care.

It is important everyone understands these changes will be phased in over the next five years and we are not planning a major upheaval." For info visit: www.healthfornel. nhs.uk

George P. Williams, the English clergyman who was reported as missing from home, and who was thought to have started for this country on the Paris, was not on the Aurania or the Berlin, and none of the passengers of the Paris knew anything

oreacher

By Sally England

■HE Reverend Pedr Williams was a popular man. He had taken over the pastorate at Lower Clapton Congregational Church in 1889, and built a reputation as an effective preacher and eloquent speaker on political and social topics.

His text for Sunday, 4 February 1894 was Genesis 4.13-14: 'And Cain said unto the Lord, my punishment is greater than I can bear. Behold thou has driven me out this day from the face of the ground and from thy face shall I be hid, and I shall be a fugitive and a wanderer on the earth.'

The sermon had been particularly powerful and moving, and in hindsight was more significant than it at first seemed. He was due to give a lecture to the Lower Clapton Literary Association on 14 February. An assembly of 500 filled the church hall, but there was no sign of the preacher.

It emerged that Mrs Williams, a sickly woman and mother of four sickly children, had last seen her husband at their home on 8 February, when he had said he would be away until the Saturday. An acquaintance also saw Williams that morning, equipped for a journey, carrying two portmanteaux, various hats, and a large number of bank notes.

He had gone to the Congregational Memorial Hall in the City to arrange a supply preacher to cover his absence, then written a note to one of his deacons explaining that he was going to the countryside for a few days holiday. On 10 February, Mrs Williams received a note, undated but postmarked from Richmond, Surrey, in which her husband stated that he was going to visit Margate for a few days.

Rumours began to spread that Williams had been suffering from depression; that he was unhappy at home; and that he had got into serious financial difficulties.

On 21 February, the Hackney Gazette received a letter from a Mr Outhwaite of Lee, in Kent. He stated that on 10 February he had seen Williams at Waterloo Station on the platform for a train to Southampton, connecting with the SS City of Paris, which was due to depart for New York. Shortly after it set out, the ship ran into difficulties and turned back to Queenstown (now Cóbh) in Ireland, where Williams was also reported as being seen walking on the quay, waiting to board the SS City of Berlin. The passenger list for the SS City of Paris was checked, but no Williams was mentioned.

CHRONICLE,

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

By now the church deacons had notified Scotland Yard, and the police had circulated a description: 'Missing since the 8th inst., the Rev. Pedr Williams, of 197 Amburst road, Hackney. Age 30, height 5ft. 7½ in., sallow complexion, dark hair, thin, small dark moustache, broad build, large head, upright carriage, short legs, long body. Has a deep voice, and walks with firm steps. Dress – gray frieze overcoat with velvet collar, dark-gray suit, and high silk hat.'

Now all anyone could do was wait until the SS City of Berlin docked in New York.

School children taking part in an exercise designed to help them stay safe while travelling by bus

AROUND 50 Year Six pupils visited Hackney Museum on 8 December to learn about being safe and responsible citizens.

Pupils from Grasmere and Randal Cremer primary schools met staff from the London Transport Museum, London Ambulance, The Dogs Trust, London Fire Brigade and the Metropolitan Police. The 10 to 11-yearolds participated in seven interactive sessions to help them to become more independent as they prepare for the transition from primary to secondary school. Chris Nix, Safety and Citizenship Manager at London Transport Museum, said: "We are keen to plan and support local events to prepare children to become more independent citizens. "Our joint programmes mean we can deliver sessions that are relevant to the young people and make the learning interesting and memorable."
The event was part of a two-week Hackney Junior Citizenship Scheme, open to all schools in the borough.
It was run by Transport for London, and supported by Hackney's Safer Schools
Partnership and The Learning
Trust

£3.9m funding

HE Council has received a £3.9million funding boost for 2011/12
from Transport for London (TfL).

Hackney receives money each year as part of the Local Implementation Plan (LIP) allocated to London boroughs, to fund projects that support the Mayor of London's Transport Strategy. These include improvements to town centres and public spaces, new cycling facilities, safer roads and measures to smooth traffic flow.

Hackney has developed proposals for a number of schemes it hopes to finance with the package, which is £70,000 more than the last financial year.

Plans include £35,000 to bring car club bays within a three minute walk of every resident by 2013/14;

£170,000 for the borough's programme of free cycle training for people of all ages living or working in the borough; and £35,000 to encourage sustainable ways of travelling to work including estate cycle parking and travel awareness outreach.

The Council will be able to prioritise projects according to local need.

Following the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review, the funding allocated to London boroughs will drop over the next three years to reflect the reduced grant TfL receives from the Department for Transport.

However, funding for programmes such as road maintenance, bridge strengthening and major schemes are being safeguarded. Funding is also being made available for modernising traffic signals and initiatives such as completion of the London Strategic Walking Network.

News in brief

Pit stop success

THE Council's final 'cycle pit stop' event of 2010 was a great success with nearly 200 people stopping off to take part in activities in London Fields.

More than 50 bikes got a free health check, and cyclists took advantage of expert advice on maintenance and the best routes through the borough to help riders boost their confidence and safety. Over 150 people also got free security tagging for their bikes, and more than 50 people took part in HGV awareness sessions to get a driver's perspective on bike users.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, attended the 25 November event and took a turn in the HGV cab. She said: "Events like this offering free bike checks and expert advice are really useful. They demonstrate how simple and necessary it is to make sure that bikes are in a roadworthy condition, to prevent unexpected and potentially dangerous incidents." The event was organised by the Council's Sustainable Transport Team with support from the Community Safety and Road Safety Teams, along with partners from the Metropolitan Police.

Bike hire expansion

OVER 2,000 extra hire cycles are set to be installed in East London ahead of the Olympic and Paralympic Games in 2012.

The Barclays Cycle Hire scheme will expand across the area – including North

Shoreditch and all of Tower Hamlets – with 4,200 new docking points created.

When complete, the expanded London-wide scheme will cover 65km2 and have around 8,000 hire bikes available from 14,400 docking points.

Last month, a 'pay as you go' system was introduced allowing instant access to bike hire without needing a membership.

Casual users with a credit or debit card can now rent bikes by following on-screen instructions at the docking station. Once a time period is purchased (either 24 hours or seven days) the first 30 minutes of any journey will be free. For more info visit: www.tfl.gov.uk/barclayscyclehire

The Hoxton Apprentice is a social enterprise set up to train unemployed Hackney people – both in the kitchen and front of house

Six-month apprenticeships prepare people for the workplace and give them the chance to gain an NVQ in Hospitality.

Profits are returned to Training For Life, the charity which operates the restaurant, to deliver more training for unemployed

 Meanwhile beat butter until soft and fluffy, then gradually beat in egg yolks one at a time. When melted chocolate is tepid, beat into butter and egg mix, followed by flour, sugar, ground almonds and salt

Manor House update

RESIDENTS and businesses have had their say about the future of Manor House in a public consultation.

The Council was looking for views on a draft masterplan for the area around Manor House Tube station, which sits alongside Woodberry Down estate, at the junction with Seven Sisters Road and Green Lanes. The consultation ran from 27 September to 6

December last year, and officers are now analysing the feedback received and adding it to the draft Phase 1 Area Action Plan (AAP) Manor House Masterplan.

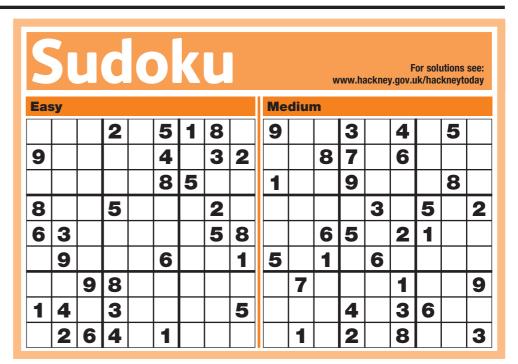

This was produced in order to set out the Council's potential planning and design policies for this area. It outlines a strategy to shape positive change in the area over a period of 15 years.

The feedback received will help decide plans for the future of this important interchange.

interchange. The Council was looking for opinions and comments on its objectives for Manor House, including proposals for a new square, and facilities at the entrance of Finsbury Park, as well as the height and use of buildings around the area. Views were also sought about how easy it is to move to, from, and within the area.

Hackney's wards in alphabetical order

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm
